Today, we proudly present the newly designed Verfassungsblog. We made a big effort to make the blog easier to navigate, to improve readability and accessibility of postings, to offer some new functions such as an Events calender, and generally to provide a fresh, modern experience for users of the blog. A big, warm thank you goes out to the WZB Berlin Social Science Center, particularly its Center for Global Constitutionalism, which generously supported us to make this relaunch possible.

We are still working on the details, so please bear with us for a little longer until we have fixed (hopefully) all remaining bugs that might still lurk in the depths of the system. Most importantly, we are currently busy completing the direly needed mobile version of the blog which will follow soon.
